

ALBANY OPENS ARMS TO SMITHS AND 'ZOO'

Mayor and Crowd of 3,000 Greet Governor-Elect, Family and Pets.

PARADE TO MANSION

One Son Runs Out of Line, Another Quits House to See School Chums.

MILLERS ARE CORDIAL

Turn Official Home Over to New Tenants—Parson to Be Counsel.

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD.

Al Smith came back to-day. The boy from Oliver street who became Governor arrived to head the State government for a second time. He will be inaugurated Monday. The return was more like the welcome to a favorite son in an old home town. It was just such a welcome as Oliver street would give Mr. Smith. And to the hundreds who tramped through snow to their shootouts and faced a sale to cheer him he was just Al. No one had more fun out of it than Mr. Smith, unless it was his sons and daughters. Whatever pride he felt over returning to the Executive Mansion to succeed the man who succeeded him two years ago was not shown.

To the Smith children it was a holiday. While formal greetings were being exchanged in the mansion Walter was scooting through the back door to join a dozen playmates of two years ago. In five minutes they were at it again.

Cheering Crowd at Station.

"Some parade," the Governor-elect remarked when the family and a rare assortment of pets left the train and started out through the packed station where the band was playing and 3,000 men and women were cheering.

With Mr. Smith came his mother, Mrs. Catherine Smith, recovered from grip; his wife, Alfred, Jr., Emily, Catherine, Arthur and Walter. The invoice of the pets included:

Three dogs: Captain, the police dog, and Chang, a Pekinese, both of which have been at the mansion before, and a new unnamed Japanese sparrow presented to Mrs. Smith at the Grand Central Terminal, New York, to-day by Mrs. W. W. Cohen.

One monkey, which occupied the center of the animal stage and which was most unwelcome to the dogs.

One canary bird, very meek and songless beside the monkey.

"Where are the goldfish?" the Governor-elect asked in apparent alarm when the train neared Albany and the "parade" was forming. Walter explained that the fish were to be sent up later.

Two ponies, gifts to the Smith children, were shipped by mistake to Controller Fleming in Troy. They will arrive to-morrow.

Monkey Becomes "Snooky."

The family left New York on the 12:25 train. The police band went to the Grand Central to give Mr. Smith a send off and played his old favorites "Tammany," "The Sidewalk of New York" and all the rest. Tom Foley, John Gilchrist and a few friends were there and several hundred passersby joined in giving Mr. Smith a cheer.

On the ride up, the family occupied a room and several chairs in a Pullman. Walter adopted the monkey as his own, after a family argument. Mr. Smith, asked the monkey's name, said he would not want to repeat what he had called it, but Walter announced he had named it Snooky.

Snooky and Walter occupied the space usually assigned to three persons in a Pullman room. The other children sat in chairs and tried to make Chang friendly with the new Japanese spaniel. Toward the end of the trip they were succeeding.

Mr. Smith had only one serious conference. That was with Col. Frederick Greene who may be Highways Commissioner. The Colonel sat down next to the monkey's cage while Mr. Smith sat opposite, in his shirt sleeves and with his new inaugural hat, a brown derby, on the back of his head. The monkey kept tugging at the Colonel's coat and once got hold of his scarf. But the Colonel lost nothing and was silent about the appointment.

Welcome From Gov. Miller.

Major Coogan, military secretary to Gov. Miller, met the Governor-elect at the train, extended the Governor's compliments and an invitation to the mansion.

Then the parade started. Mr. Smith led with Mrs. Hackett of Albany. Politicians remarked that it was the first time in about thirty years that a Democratic Mayor of Albany had welcomed a Democratic Governor. Mrs. Catherine Smith and George Van Name, the new Governor's secretary, and members of the family followed. Charles M. Winchester and Edward Corning, Democratic leader, were in the welcoming delegation with a dozen others.

When the family reached the automobiles in front of the station Alfred, Jr., who had been separated from the party, tried to crowd through the line and had an argument with a policeman. Mr. Smith heard it and rescued the boy just as the officer was taking him away.

Mr. Smith, Mayor Hackett and John J. Lyons, Secretary of State, rode in the first automobile. The Governor-elect waved his hand to the thousands who stood along the way, collars up and caps down. A police escort and the Tenth Regiment Band led the parade from the station to the mansion.

Governor and Mrs. Miller were waiting at the mansion when the Smiths arrived. The greeting was cordial. Fifteen minutes later the Governor and Mrs. Miller left the mansion.

"Snooky" Meets Walter's Pets.

Left alone, the Smith family went to their old rooms. Mr. and Mrs. Smith greeted many of the old servants. Photographers arrived and wanted a group picture. Mr. Smith rounded up all the family except Walter. The Governor-elect went strolling around the place for him, and finally found him in the back yard with nearly a dozen of his schoolboy pals of two years ago. Walter let the boys take Snooky while he had his picture taken in a family group around the fireplace. Mr. Smith spent

It Is Not the Leap at the Start

but the steady going on that gets there.

The most conscientious economist of time finds the days too short for what he wants to do.

To the thoroughgoing man almost every week has more than seven days in it—by dint of extra endeavor.

Whatever our work may be we must shoulder it and not waste an hour.

It is of no use to dream of nothingness, or knock at this door and then at that, or hunt a bell rope to call some one to help us; each must lift his own burden and preserve every minute to finish his own part and not set a bad example of idleness or shirking to the other fellow.

There is a point to stop at, but it is not until your fair duty is done.

We cannot wait upon our good customers by gossiping or looking out of the windows.

Our business is limited to the measure of watchfulness, celerity and agreeability of our representatives in each section.
